Client: A global investment firm based in the United Arab Emirates

The Challenge: A New York based law firm representing this foreign client was required to collect and review potentially responsive data on-site in the UAE. Due to stipulations in the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, as well as other business drivers, the data could not leave the country until it had been collected and reviewed by US attorneys under strict supervision by the client.

The Solution: Inventus was called upon to propose possible solutions to this complex logistical problem, under tight deadlines. Utilizing a Clearwell review platform was clearly the best choice for this unique project, but because it was not possible to bring the data to the technology, a plan was implemented to bring the technology to the data. In very short order, a Clearwell appliance was shipped on location to the UAE; and travel arrangements were made for Inventus staff to accompany the legal team for IT and project management support.

Inventus staff worked closely with the client's IT department so that the documents were ready to review when the legal team hit the ground. Several hundred gigabytes of data were quickly culled, and in less than one week, the legal team was able to export a very small responsive set of data for return to the US. Both the client and the law firm were so impressed with the Clearwell solution, each continue to utilize the tool on an on-going basis for E-Discovery document reviews.
